HOCKEY BANQUET.

A most successful banquet was tendered to the Calgary hockey team at the Criterion restaurant last night by our local team. Some eighty gentlemen sat down to a most delicious spread. The utmost enthusiasm prevailed throughout. Mr. A. Brown, who acted as chairman, first called on Rev. Mr. Gray to open the evening's entertainment with prayer. The toast to the King was then proposed, drank and responded to by singing the national anthem. Instrumental music by Mr. Barford was followed by a song from Mr. T. Kelly. Mr. Kelly was forced to respond to an encore. Mr. Griesbach then proposed a toast to the benefactors and patrons of the Edmonton hockey club. He paid a tribute to Messrs. R. Secord, Calgary Brewing Company, Thos. Hourston, T. A. Stephen and J. W. Morris. Mr. Brown was the first to respond. He said that Edmonton was proud of her hockey team, and mentioned the able manner in which she backed them up at all times. Mr. Secord seconded the remarks of Mr. Brown. Mr. Morer explained the residential clause in the challenge cup rules saying that when the rules were laid down it was clearly understood that no person could play who had not lived in the town he played for three months previous to the match. J. W. Morris then spoke mentioning the able manner in which Edmonton citizens supported her hockey team. Mr. J. L. Johnston then sang "Sailing" and the gathering joined in the chorus. He responded to a persistent encore, Rev. Mr. Gray then sang a couple of songs which the audience received with great applause. Mr. Barford then gave some pious selections which the audience greatly enjoyed. Mr. Helliwell proposed a toast to the Calgary club could with the names of Messrs. Smart, Barber and Houdon. "For they are Jolly Good Fellows" was then sung amid great enthusiasm. Mr. Smart, of Calgary, first replied saying that the Calgary club had enjoyed themselves very much in Edmonton. However, he was sorry that a small town like Edmonton could beat a city like Calgary. This was met by a storm of "Ohs". He had seen a lot of fast hockey matches played but none as fast as the one that was just over. Messrs. Barber and Houdon followed and spoke much in the same strain. Mr. Kelly was then called on for a song after which Mr. Cartwright sang a couple of comic songs. Mr. Bellamy was then called on. He favored forming a league in Alberta to be divided into three sections, southern, central and northern. He moved that Messrs. Orr, Blain and Helliwell be a committee to meet next fall and make all arrangements. Mr. Gray seconded this motion and it was carried amid applause. A toast to the ladies was then proposed coupled with the name of Cardell. Mr. Cardell who made a few suitable remarks and then proposed a toast to the Edmonton hockey club coupled with the names of Joyce, Bellamy and Mr. Leod. The different speakers praised the Calgary hockey club, mentioning that Edmonton had learned many good points from Calgary. Mr. Bellamy related the history of hockey in Edmonton. Mr. Helliwell then gave a recitation. The banquet which was very successful in every point broke up with the singing of the national anthem.

GOOD ROADS AND BETTER TERMS.

The Alberta good roads deputation, has presented its case at Ottawa, supported by the presence and endorsement as to material facts, by the premier, and commissioners of public works of the Territories. By the notice which has been taken by the Ottawa correspondents of the leading papers of this petition and the efforts in its behalf, it would seem that whether the actual prayer of the petition is granted or not it will beyond question be a strong influence in securing a fuller recognition of the special and pressing needs of the Territories in the matter of public works, brought about by a combination of successive years of exceptional rain fall and an unprecedented rush of immigration.

There have been wet years in the Territories before, as wet as the past two or three years have been, but there was no such immense number of people located and located in the country—the newer settlers needing roads as never before, and the older settlers as busily employed in fencing up all practicable means of ingress and egress. The difficulties which settlers had to face during recent years in the matter of roads, were not so much because of natural, as because of the artificial conditions resulting from increased settlement. It is the increased settlement which makes road improvement necessary; the same increase of settlement, which has overfolded western railways with traffic, and has swollen the trade and revenue of the Dominion to such a satisfactory degree. Everybody can't have everything their way, but of all the classes of people or sections of country who are entitled to share liberally in the increased revenue enjoyed by the Dominion, the people of the Territories and Manitoba are most entitled because they have been most largely instrumental in creating that increase.

When the question of appropriations for purposes of Northwest government are under consideration in parliament it is not unusual to have it pointed out that the Territorial government receives as much per head of population as do the governments of the provinces. This may or may not be approximately correct. It does not make any difference. The conditions of the Territories are such, that an equal payment per head to that paid to the provinces, does not by any means put the western settlers on an equality with the residents of the eastern provinces. There are distances to cover and conditions to face here, which if they ever did exist in those older provinces, do not exist now. And at no time in the early steps of the development of those provinces did they contribute in proportion like the same proportion to the general wealth of the Dominion as do Manitoba and the Territories. That part of the country which is adding to the wealth of the whole country at the rate of from twenty-five to fifty millions of dollars per year, and which is increasing its contributions rapidly from year to year may very well be supposed to be in circumstances requiring a larger distribution from the Federal treasury than the people of any of the provinces receive.

It is worthy of mention that no longer than a month or two ago, the premiers of every province of the Dominion, met at Quebec, to declare that each several province was receiving less in subsidy from the Dominion treasury than it was entitled to, according to its needs and circumstances. If that is the case in the provinces now much more so must it be the case in the Territories. If the Territories are now only receiving in proportion to the provinces. While the revenues of the Territorial government have been increased from year to year during the past four or five years, those increases have not kept pace with the rapid development, and the special climate conditions prevailing. At the same time there is no allegation from any side that money received by the Territorial government for public purposes is not made to go to the utmost limit in serving the pressing necessities of the people. We have an inexpensive system of local government. We have an honest and capable administration. We have more to show in useful work for each dollar received from the Dominion treasury, than any of the provinces. There is no danger then that money appropriated to the Northwest Territories will be other than usefully and carefully expended. The great necessity is to overcome the fear which prevails to a large extent throughout the eastern provinces when the question of subsidy is under consideration, that the West will get more than its share. A competent and effective presentation of the needs of our part of the West, such as that of the Alberta good roads deputation is bound to have a useful result in convincing the east as to western requirements and in laying the foundation for "better terms."

Time is up. The Alberta challenge cup stays in Edmonton. The large crowd cheers itself hoarse as it leaves the rink. The Calgary boys are good stick handlers and a fast aggregation throughout. But Edmonton proved itself too strong for them, winning solely on its merits.

DEATH OF JAMES P. VANCE.

Saskatoon Herald.

A painful incident occurred near Lizard lake on Thursday, Feb. 12, resulting in the death of James P. Vance, locating engineer for the Canadian Pacific railway. He was one of the most trusted and energetic members of the engineering staff, and was well known and respected in the west, he having done much of the preliminary work through this district and made the final location from Edmonton to the fourth meridian.

He had charge of the surveys being made from Saskatoon to join his finished work west of Battleford, and about ten days before his death had received orders to make an examination of the country lying south of Eagle Hills from Saskatoon to Lizard lake.

On Monday, 12th, with James W. Ballentine as teamster, they left Saskatoon and reached Lizard lake on Wednesday without incident. They had camped at the house of Wm. McNair for the night, and went on with the party, intending to look for some horses that had strayed away.

Thursday opened clear, and mild, and Mr. Vance told Ballentine to turn back seven miles and then turn south three miles to a small lake and camp and await his return. He was going to see a long lake to the hills, about ten miles south, and expected to be back in the evening.

Mr. Vance took his snowshoes and a light lunch and set out on his trip. He had only a sweater, a toque and a light pair of gloves. He was advised to put on a coat, but declined, saying he could not walk in one.

In the afternoon a blinding snow storm came up and Ballentine and McNair watched and waited all night, keeping the fire and light burning, but he did not come in.

On setting out Mr. Vance started north, to visit a long lake in the hills that he wanted to see, intending to return to the camp.

Next morning, Friday, the watchers went to where they hoped to find Mr. Vance, but not succeeding they returned to camp for dinner and then struck across the lake to look for his tracks. They found them and saw that he had passed within three hundred yards of the camp but had missed the trail leading into it but struck the one they had made in going to Lizard lake. They then pitched up and drove as fast as they could, hoping either to overtake or head him off, as he was travelling in the opposite direction to that in which he should have gone to find it, looking for the trail into it, or possibly trying to reach the house.

From his tracks it was evident he had come through the storm safely, the marks of his footprints being quite distinct. When he reached the trail he stood still, evidently pondering which way to go, and started the wrong way. For about a quarter of a mile he walked straight, following the sleigh track closely, but after he stopped frequently and danced to keep his feet warm. When found he was lying on his back on the trail, quite dead. They then took his trail backwards and found the snowshoes about a mile from where he fell. They also found that he had been at a camp at which they had taken dinner earlier on the trip and made an unsuccessful attempt to light a fire.

Taking up the body Ballentine and McNair then started for home, driving to Bear's Head Hill and over a terribly rough country to the Forty-Mile station, which was the nearest point at which they could strike a travelled road, and reached there at one o'clock on Saturday morning.

Saturday they started for town and when at the Twenty-Mile station fell in with Mr. McCulloch, chief of the C. P. R. survey party working near there, who took possession of the body and would take it to Saskatoon.
